Monica joined Harman Claytor Corrigan & Wellman after nearly two years of civil litigation practice at a boutique firm in Baltimore. She has experience practicing before both federal and state courts in the District of Columbia and Maryland. As a first-year attorney, she also authored a pleading addressing a novel question on First Amendment protections in the Fourth Circuit. Monica attended the American University Washington College of Law after obtaining an LL.M. in International Law at the University of Nottingham in the United Kingdom. At Harman Claytor, Monica now focuses primarily on defending individuals and businesses in tort and medical malpractice matters.
