

Environmental and Toxic Torts

Harman Claytor's lawyers have successfully represented a wide range of public entities and private companies in environmental and toxic tort litigation in Virginia and the Washington, DC area. We rely on our established relationships with highly specialized medical and scientific experts to defend local governments, corporations and individuals in claims involving mold, silicosis, asbestosis, lead, Chinese drywall, toxic fumes and environmental exposure, wetlands, Superfund Act, contaminated groundwater, and surface water runoff. We are also skilled in aggressive, results-oriented motions practice relating to issues concerning jurisdiction, preemption, expert challenges, and causation defenses.
